BELFAST (UPI) — A ceaseffre called by the provisional wing of the Irish Republican Army brought a shaky peace to Northern Ireland today, but it was punctuated by at least one death. British Army officers said they would wait and see whether the truce lasts

Midnight in Londonderry a single shot rang out across the city as the 12 strokes tolled from the clock tower. In the Ballymurphy district of Belfast HRA gummen marked midnight with a volley of shots into the air, not at British soldiers nor Protestant Ustermen. estant Ulstermen

Then silence as the people of Northern Ireland waited quietly to see if it were true a ceasefire that might be the first step to ward finding peace and ending three bloody years of fighting actually was working.

started. Huge bonfires started in Bally-murphy and Andersonstown, two Roman Catholic areas in Belfast.

More than 700 cases of beer hijacked from a brewer's truck Monday were broken out and the singing and shouting started.

And in the Catholic enclave at Falls Road, residents stopped British soldiers to share a drink and a moment of celebration. The areas has seen some of the fiercest fighting in the three-year campaign.

There was, however, some sniping at British army posts an hour after the truce went into effect, presumably by die-hard militant members of the IRA who found it hard to accept a truce. Whether today's assailants were also die-hard guerrillas was not known.

Police said 18-year-old William Galloway died in a hospital today of gunshot wounds suffered in a clash between Protestants and Roman Catholics just before the cease fire

Detectives were also investigating the death of 38-year-old Bernard Norey to determine whether it was a part of the sectarian violence. Two unidentified men halled a bakery worker doing his rounds this morning and ordered him to drive a car containing Norey's body to a hospital. Norey was dead

McGOVERN MAKES A NEW TALLY

WASHINGTON (AP) Senator George McGovern has backed off his claim of enough delegates votes to win the Democratic presidential nomination and now says the prize still dangles just out of McGovern strategists fig-ured late Monday that the candidate holds 1,492.75 dele-gate commitments, a scant 16.25 short of the number needed at the Democratic no-inating convention in Miami Beach.

The turnabout came after a recalculation showed the South Dakota senator Monday erred in claiming to have topped the magic number with 1½ votes to spare.

His chief rival, Senator Hubert Humphrey of Minnesota, clung to the hope that the party's credentials committee would trim more delegates by parcelling out the 271 delegate votes from California's winner-take-all primary.

McGovern told a Washington news conference Monday he had won the support of 96.75 votes held by uncommitted black delegates enough to guarantee him more than the nomination on the first ballot.

The latest tally by The Asociated Press of first-ballot strength, which doesn't include the new black support for McGovern, gives him 1.338.15—still 171 short of the number needed for nomination.

ticularly Humphrey, are plac-ing considerable stress on the California challenge which, if successful, could take away 151 of McGovern's delegates and distribute them on a pro-portional basis among his Ca-lifor-nia primary foes.

Rivals in Billions

All thought that the United States might enjoy some savings on armaments as a result of the Moscow agreement to limit nuclear weapons seems to be evaporating in the light of the budget proposals now coming before the U.S. Congress. On the contrary, the agreement is being used as an argument for still larger arms appropriations. The relatively minor restrictions placed on nuclear defence and offence apparently demand allowable increases in planes, munitions and ships, including bombers and submarines, and strategic systems of indefinite complexity and cost.

The current weapons bill amounts to $21.3 billions - a staggering sum in what is technically peacetime, and a bewildering aftermath of what was considered to be an arms reduction triumph by Russia and the United States, Reports indicate that the Soviet Union likewise has plans for armament expansion - all, of course, within the permissive limits of the SALT agreement.

A California Representative points out that within the last ten years the United States has "taken in $772 billions from individual income taxes, and we've spent $762 billions on defence." On this scale, he claims the United States is going broke in pursuit of the objective of a "strong America."

That concept, one would think, has already been achieved in the existing nuclear strength of the country. The fact that Russia has equal capability to blow up the world should not lessen the American position of strength. For the projected multi-billion-dollar increases in United States armaments will not in reality increase the strength of that nation. Inevitably the Soviet Union will counter with still further weapons, with detection and delivery systems, and the lethal balance will be maintained.

Both countries could achieve a balance at a much lower level of armament and cost and still enjoy the same degree of national safety. If relative equality is all that is required - since neither country could long get away with a pronounced superiority — then it need not be set at an astronomical height to obtain the needed effect.

But that is a hard point to get over to the U.S. Congress, as it must be to persuade the men in the Kremlin. Improvement, if any, will apparently be through progressive but minimal decreases over a long period of time - accompanied by a continuing waste of billions of dollars and roubles in the name of security. In the final analysis, security must be a joint creation of all nations - and will probably be found at a bargain price.

questions in the House of Commons the other day, Robert Stanfield went on television to support the claims of five eastern provinces to offshore mineral rights. He fell into a very curious error.

Mr. Stanfield's general contention was that there is a Canadian tradition in these matters to which the federal Government should defer. As he pointed out, Ottawa has from time to time turned over vast areas to the central and western provinces. The Conservative leader spoke of transfers "without strings."

This invites the conclusion that the people of the Atlantic provinces, who were obviously in no position to add to their dry land real estate, are entitled to the same fair treatment. On this showing, however, it is difficult to work up much sympathy for the fifth claimant, Quebec, which gained enormously from the transactions mentioned by Mr. Stan-

Overlooked Issue

What is odd though is that the Conservative leader appears to have forgotten, or has not been briefed on, an issue the final analysis, such a position which for many years loomed very large in the politics of this country. It was, would destroy the very attitude which made scientific progress posmoreover, a Conservative issue and of primary concern in provinces on which Mr. Stanfield relies for much of his sup-

In dealing with Ontario and Quebec, Ottawa was most generous. There may have been one or two strings, notably in respect to the responsibility for Indian but it would not appear that much attenation was paid to these. In the case of the western provinces, however, it was a completely different story.

When Manitoba was enlarged and her two western neighbours created, the federal Government then headed by Sir Wilfrid Laurier retained the resources. In their place, the provinces peceived certain revenues, notably the School Lands fund. Thus there were very important strings. A cry arose about unequal treatment and an issue developed which was not settled for a quarter of a cenferred the leadership on Mr. Bennett.

If Mr. Stanfield is basing his case on tradition, he is plainly in trouble. The tradition is that federal governments have acted in these matters according to their judgment. When the Borden administration handed huge estates to Ontario and Quebec, with a minimum of string, it neglected to do anything for the well-trussed western provinces despite the fact that prairie Conservatives had argued strongly for a transfer of the resources. Thus both parties felt free in practice to deal as they chose with natural resources even when policy involved clear discrimination.

The failure of the Saskatchewan case indicates that this policy, whatever else may be said about it, was not unconstitutional. Similarly, the verdict on West Coast off-shore resources, though not conclusive for the eastern provinces, suggests that Ottawa is on good legal ground in the present dispute. Legality aside, something may doubtless be made of the fact that, after 25 years, the prairie provinces did secure their resources. But in that case there is nothing in the tradition, such as it is, to arouse any particular sense of urgency in Ottawa. It is open to any party to suggest that the five governments should be given satisfaction, say in 1990. It, could be argued that this would meet any requirements imposed by Canadian tradition. But this in all probability-is an argument that will go without a political sponsor since it is not likely to arouse much enthusiasm in the Governments headed by Messrs. "None of this would have happened," he wrote in a letter to the city's mayor, "had the San Diego police department done what was done in every other community, which is simply to assist in time of need when the need is stated well in advance."

In other words, it's up to the community to provide, at community expense, the peace-keeping force when the Stones visit a centre to make a lot of money. A survey among kibbutzim affiliated to the Labor butzim affiliated to the Labor Party — the biggest group—showed that most mothers now want an end to the children's house. Many settlements are only waiting for extra rooms to be built.

Advocates of the new trend say the children still live in their peer group all day—and all kibbutz secondary schools are still residential.

At the same time, they have become affluent, pulled down the old corrugated iron shacks and built neat flats or bungalows — often with a television set in each home, provided by the kibbutz. They are switching from agriculture to industry. They employ thousands of hired workers, including Arabs from the occupied territories, both in the fields and in the factories.

For the youngsters, all this

For the youngsters, all this is ordinary life. They know no other until they join the army at 18. When I talked to classes at kibbutz secondary schools, most children looked forward to the army as a chance "to see something else." They had nothing to compare their lives to.

The children's indifference to ideology is assounding. At a big school near Lake Kimneret, a boy-said he thought kibbutzim should pay incentive bonuses for work—the heresy of heresies. money."
Those who definitely want to leave say they want to live their own life," or complain that the kibbutz has become as materialistic as Tel Aviv.

More Idealistic

Some go to the other extreme and are more idealistic than their parents. They intend to found new settlements (five kibbutzim have been set up since the six-day war, mostly in occupied territories). They want to get the old people off their backs and rediscover the thrill of starting something from scratch. They are pragmatic and sophisticated about themselves. "When kids come here from town, I can see they pity us," said a girl. But she did not mind, and pitied them.

Israeli children have more organized fun than most—and kibbutz children, self-governing and free from parental interference, have the most fun. Some of the richer kibbutzim have their own children's farm, zoo and swimming pool.

Communal child-rearing is Communal child-rearing is still the rule. From babyhood to secondary school they live in dormitories, spending only a few hours a day, and weekends, with their parents. But the children's house has gradually been humanized, and the trend now is back to famiity life. Bringing the children kibbutz resolutions.

The children's house grew up in the 1830s, when kibbutzim were rejecting the family as bourgeois! "At night people used to dump their kids in the children's house like so many parcels," said a young father. "The nurses discouraged lingering because it interfered with their work." In the 1950s came a reaction. The Eton came a reaction. The Eton cult went right out, and the family came back in.

family came back in.
Parents now put their small children lovingly to bed in the children's house and nobody minds if they stay until they are asleep. All afternoon they have given them their complete attention in their own house, in a more relaxed family atmosphere than in an urban home. And the pre-sence of uncles and grand-parents allows the children the benefits of an extended

The movement away from the children's house started in the 1850s, after the release of a report on parental deprivation among orphans. Sociologists found that while kibbutz children developed phenomenal group loyalties and made ex-cellent soldiers, they were rel-atively insecure as infants.

Who Needs Who?

But the real demand for bringing the children back home came not from academ-ics, but from the mothers. "Small children need their mums at night," they claimed, but their husbands reported that it was really the reported that it was really the mums who needed their children.

Sexual liberation used to be promoted by mixed showers for children as well as dormitories. It used to be repeated, with pride, that "you can't be romantic about someone you've sat on the potty with." But field studies of American psychiatrists have found that the children are not as unquirotic as they seem. They say the system created harmful stimulation and repression, which showed later in apparent lack of warmth and feeling.

WE CAN'T AFFORD CARS FOR CHINA

Bicycles Are the Limit

STOCKHOLM — A Chinese official was taiking with a Japanese ecologist. "In Peking," he said, "there are 1.5 million bicycles. From your experience in Tokyo, do you think it would be advantageous to change to motor transport?"

A question like that does wonders to focus one's mind on the problem of material growth in a finite world. If China with its 700 million people were to become an automobile society, where would the necessary steel and oil and other resources come from on this earth? And what would be the impact on the capacity of the oceans and atmosphere to absorb wastes?

It takes only common sense, not scholarship, to understand that the earth could never sustain a China with earth could never sustain a China with American patterns of automobile use and other consumption. In other words, the world's capacity for material pro-duction and consumption is not infinite. As we look around us, at booming popu-lations and beleaguered nature, we can begin to sense the limits

The study made for the Club of Rome, "The Limits to Growth," has been widely charged with feeding un-proved data into the computers that proved data—into the computers that came up with gloomy projections. But as William Ruckelshaus, head of the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency, remarked the other day: "The questions raised by the Clob of Rome are what really matter; to attack particular figures is irrelevant."

The fundamental questions of how to avoid social and biological disaster on a crowded planet were not discussed in the United Nations environmental conference just ended here. But they were explored in the accompanying unofficial meetings, with interesting results.

There was a notable statement from the non-governmental organizations with representatives here, ranging from ecological groups to chambers of commerce. It was read to the UN conference by Dr. Margaret Mead.

"So great has been the technological thrust of our science and energy," the statement said, "so rapacious our consumption of non-renewable resources, so rapid our growth in numbers, so heavy the load we place on our life-supporting systems that we begin to perceive the finite qualities of the biosceive the finite qualities of the bios-phere of soil, air and water . . . This is a revolution in thought fully comparable revolution in thought fully comparable to the Copernican revolution."

This revolutionary new perception, if such it is, as a practical matter demands action from the handful of rich countries. They use three-quarters of the earth's resources, and it is their exponential material growth that threatens the fragile biosphere.

No one can expect voluntary restraint on the part of the developed countries. The politicians of America and Britain and the Soviet Union are still calling for more economic growth, because their people want more. Nor will the rich countries readily share will the rich countries readily share their prosperity through foreign aid.

But these are realities which may force a change in the developed world's attlitude toward economic growth and local political control has been weak, with the result that prices to the developed countries have stayed relatively low. But those factors are changing.

The acute example is oil. Demand is multiplying: one oilman visiting Stockholm said it would take "a new Kuwait" annually just to satisfy increased American use. And those who have the oil are getting politically tougher. The result, according to some experts, is that the price could double or triple by 1980. That will be one way of making rich countries share the wealth.

A second reality is that some ecological limits seem to be at hand. The energy crisis is the one we know best.

Consider this example: a recent study of southerf California concluded that that area could double its electric power production just one more time before producing heat beyond the capacity of air and water to absorb without deathly consequences for marine and human life. But southern California's demand for power has been doubling every 10 years. Some form of involuntary restraint lies ahead.

Barbara Ward posed the difficult questions in a moving speech here in Barbara Ward posed the difficult questions in a moving speech here in Stockholm. The economic assumptions of a planet without limits cannot be maintained, she said, so we have to face the choices on how to use and share what there is. She concluded:

"To act without rapacity, to use knowledge with wisdom, to respect interdependence, to operate without hubris and greed are not simply moral imperatives. They are an accurate scientific description of the means of survival."

Frozen Vegetables for the Barbecue

Almost any frozen vegetable may be cooked on a barbecue. Remove from carton, wrap, still frozen, in two 18-inch square pieces of heavy aluminum foil. Place seasonings right on top of frozen block, using a small pat of butter or margarine, salt, pepper and herbs to taste. Wrap loosely but be sure package is sealed with a double fold to prevent moisture from escaping. Place on back of grill over coolest part of fire and cook for about 20 minutes (or less, according to the vegetable).

fore joining the former CCF as a founding member and years in the B.C. legislature as leader of the Opposition

In the B.C. legislature he sat for many years with his father, Ernest, one of the first father-and-son combinations in any Parliament.

In 1952, when British Columbians turned their back on the Liberals and Conserva-tives coalition, the CCF under Winch came within one seat of forming the government.

The election was won after days of cliff-hanging re-counts — by the Social Credit party of W. A. C. Bennett.

A year later Winch, after serving as leader of the pro-vincial opposition from 1941, dropped out of provincial poli-tics and ran for the federal House, where he has re-mained ever since.

The offer was made to com-pensate for work done by stu-dents in cleaning up the beaches at White Rock and beaches at White Rock and Surrey after an oil spill earlier this month at Cherry Point.

A letter to the company said all 11 teachers at the school "would like to publicly state that we would in no way consider accepting this $300 as compensation for our oil-soaked beaches and destroyed marine life."

"It occurs to us." the letter

"It occurs to us," the letter further stated, "that ARCO might construe this $300 as settling accounts with the people who have been hurt by their unconscionable for damage resulting from the oil spill has been opened here by an insurance company.

Manager Larry Buckley of Northland-Crawford Co. said Monday that only claims for tangible damage to private property are being paid cur-rently. Most of these so far. have come from people with oil-stained clothes or boats smeared with oil.

Buckley said claims for services rendered in helping clean up oil here and at Crescent Beach are being recorded and passed on to AROO officials.

Meanwhile, the New York Times says the oil spill has underscored again the need to reduce friction between Canada and the United States.

In an editorial, the paper says the spill should lead the U.S. government to reconsider its decision to build an Alaska pipeline which would carry oil for tankers to ship down the west coast.

Igloos Speed Cargo Handling

CALGARY (CP) — The igloo shipping concept is a big hit with customers and is helping to revolutionize the air cargo industry.

A. D. Russell of Vancouver said keeping ground handling at a minimum, they are simply slid aboard and reduce transportation costs and time transportation costs and time. Igloos are spin-glass shells shaped to fit the bellies of jetliners or the fuselages of all-eargo DC-8s.

H. R. Ernst, the company's cargo manager in Calgary, said household moving companies haven't taken advantage of the concept, but when they do, they will find a ready market in Calgary.

"A lot of oil company executives here take their families with them when they go on temporary assignment to places like the Middle East.

"They are allowed to take household effects, and containers would be ideal for this type of job, with the igloo going straight to the door of the Middle East quarters.

"Breakage, pilferage and insurance costs — they're eliminated."

Air Canada is discussing the advantages of igloos with moving companies, Mr. Rusell said.

Pacific Western Airlines has increased cargo opera-tions by use of igloos because to the sheltered pallet idea. CP Air, which only carries freight below deck, is the only major airline in Western Canada that doesn't use the con-

Al Campbell, PWA's assistant to the vice-president of northern operations, said the 7,000-pound containers have streamlined the company's carge operation.

"We sometimes use the Boeing 737 as a pure freighter and we can load up five igloos in 20 minutes while the aircraft is being serviced."

dian wine industry, faced with a growing demand and shortage of raw materials, has been forced to look for addi-tional vinyards and consider the importation of grapes.

J. H. Beatty, new president of the Canadian Wine Institute, said in a recent interview the Niagara Peninsula, major source of grapes, soon will not be able to meet production needs.

He said the solution to the supply problem is the importation of raw materials, not only concentrate but grapes and blending wine.

It's a Woman's World In the Bid for Munich

Meanwhile, down in a place called Los Alamos, New Mexico, two Canadian girls were emerging as one, two in the North American Olympic trials pentathlon championships.

Which, if not quite true, did serve to give Jenny Meldrum of Toronto, and Penny May, ex of Victoria, a one-two finish against the best in the U.S. More important and convincing, both girls finished with over 4,200 points which is the Olympic games qualifying standard. And no U.S. girls did!

And that isn't the best in Canadian pentathlon girls, either. Debbie Van Klekebelt of Mississauga, Ontario, is. She won the gold medal at the Pan-Am games where Penny May finished second and this year is running faster, and jumping farther than average force.

So, if Canada has three girls who can compete in the p tathlon at the Olympics, that must rank as a Canadian record

Meanwhile, across the country, other girls are also making their marks in track and field, the brightest of which could be the Ottawa teen-aged sensation, Glenda Reiser.

Miss Reiser ran here last week in the Invictus invitational meet, and those who were there just might have seen an Olympic medal winner in action.

One of the American runners was heard to say: "That girl

Glenda Wanted to Be a Swimmer

Even though she is only 16, her performance must rank her as Canada's best hope in the middle-distance events. She not only won the mile event here, and defeated U.S. champion Doris Brown doing it, but she cracked a Canadian record of long standing by more than 15 seconds.

Her time of 4.39.7 is under the Olympic qualifying mark, and she might have done better under better conditions. The track that night wasn't exactly fast, and several of the U.S. runners competing, said it "ran hard."

Still, Glenda did all right, and Doris Brown was the first to "She beat me before," she said in her disappointment, two seconds over the 1.500 metre Olympic distance in a new Canadian Open and Native record of 4.15.7 which was also well under the Olympic standard of 4.20. Doris holds the U.S. and American record of 4.14.6.

The odd part of the Glenda Reiser story is that she didn't actually start out to be a runner. She picked swimming as her competitive sport. "Others were better," she said of her decision to switch to track. Of her fast times, she explained it this way:

"My aim was to break the Olympic standard and qualify for Munich. That's all I was thinking about. I knew Doris would She's capable enough, even though she only hit 11.9 for the 100 metres when she was here.

Last year she turned in an 11.3, which besides being below the Olympic standard, is pretty quick. As a matter of fact if Joan Hendry is an easterner with excellent credentials. Altready she has qualified with an 11,5 for the 100, and she is one of four girls who has done 20 feet or better in the long jump.

dard by two feet when she tossed the discus 181' 9''.

If Miss May is considered Canada's best hurdler, suddenly she's got company. Wendy Taylor of Abbotsford beat her here last week in 14.2. Back east recently, Linda Wilson of Toronto lost to a U.S. girl while running a 14.1, and on Sunday here, 18-year-old Jill Pelland served notice that she deserves to be considered. She won in 14.5, her best of the year, but she feels she can do better now that her school program is out of the way.

Yes, right now, the gals have it, and Debbie Brill, who holds the Canadian high jump record of 6' ¼'', hasn't even jumped to her potential yet.

You can tell Joe Torre's in a slump because he hit a home run Monday night.

Balor Moore, the Montreal rookie who was the victim of Torre's three-run first-inning shot in St. Louis Cardinals' 4-3 baseball victory over the Expos, might not believe that, but Torre insists it's true.

The brutal, aggressive, swarming onslaught of Duran gave him a wide edge on the officials' cards. LoBianco gave Duran eight of the first 12 rounds, tabbed three for Buchanan and scored one even. Judge Bill Recht had it 9-2-1 for Duran and judge Jack Gordon had the winner in front 8-3-1. The Associated Press had Duran ahead 9-3.

$3 MILLION PEGGED FOR RESEARCH AID

OTTAWA (CP) — The National Research Council has earmarked more than $3 million to aid university researchers solve problems in such areas as environment, lasers, geology, control of such areas as environment, tasser, geology, control of mosquitoes and engineering.

The negotiated development grants to the universities will be spread over five years.

The NRC said in a news release Monday that the grants will make it possible for universities to establish mu lti-disciplinary research programs and increase knowledge in broad areas affecting Canada's, economic and social development. The amounts of the individual grants were not announced.

Grants to Laval University will be used for oceanogra-phic research. Laval's laser and optics research laborato-ty also will receive a grant enabling it to expand its laser research.

The University of Saskat-chewan will receive grants for research in applying control-led engineering principles to the agricultural industry.

TORONTO (CP) — The Bol-shoi Ballet was given a tumul-tous welcome to Toronto's O'Keefe Centre Monday night by a capacity sudience of more than 3,000 persons who didn't want to stop applauding the. Bussian company even after the final curtain came down.

Ovations, bouquets, cries of "bravo" and "more" greeted the world-famous dance troupe on its opening night of a weeklong engagement that was almost completely sold out more than a week in ad-

Almost 10 minutes of applause iconwed the final-act presentation of Carmen, with prima ballerina Maya Plisetskaya dancing the title role.

As the audience stood up and shouted for more, Miss Plisetskaya had to leave an usher holding one bouquet of flowers, because her arms were filled with another enormous floral tribute.

In the previous act, similar insistence on the part of the audience had brought a repeat performance from L. Vlasova and V. Smirnov, who turned a waltz into an acrobatic display. It brought loud collective gasps from the audience each time the ballerina launched herself several feet into the air across to her partner, who would spin her over horizontally and catch her in one arm just before she touched the floor.

In the same act, the high leaps and seemingly impossible mid-air twists of Yuri Via-dimirov also had the audience yelling "more" as he came back for five minutes of cur-tain calls,

The frequent and lengthy applause lengthened the evening's performance by a half-

Also in the audience was Miss Plisetskaya's most loyal fan. Alica Vrbsky, a 38-year-old geologist technician at New York City's Lehman College who borrows from her pension to travel to wherever the Bolshoi and Miss Plisetskaya are performing.

"The Bolshoi for me," she says, "is what other people find in drugs or hooze. When Maya dances it is as if I am up on a cloud somewhere looking down on a world in which there is only beauty and purity."

P.E.I. Festival Opens

CHARLOTTETOWN (CP)

The Charlottetown Festival opened its eighth season Monday night with the world premiere of Ballade, a musical written by Arthur Samuels of Montreal.

Roma Hearn of Vancouver plays the female lead of Laure, a young woman embitered by an earlier and tragic love affair, who falls in love with the ghost of a sailor drowned in the Yankee Gale 120 years ago. 120 years ago.

The ghost, played by Brian McKay, returns to a Gaspe Bay village, the setting for the musical, to confound resi-dents and to teach Laure to

The stars of the show were, Miss Hearn. Mr. McKay and Dennis Thatcher, a veteran Canadian character actor who played the part of Laure's fa-ther, Gros Pit.

Michel Conte wrote the mu-sical score for the show, which was directed and choreographed by Alan Lund, the festival's artistic director.

Beecher Court, an 85-year-old fisherman from North Rustico, P.E.I., attended as a guest of the festival. He told the story of the Yankee Gale to Mr. Samuels in 1967, spark-ing the idea for Ballade.

The Yankee Gale was a sudden storm that swept across the waters of P.E.I's north shore in 1852, catching mackerel fisherman unawares

New Try For Swap -Elford

Oak Bay Mayor Frances Elford said today she will try to get council to reverse its decision on Monday, not to go ahead with the swap proposed by Farmer Construction, if sufficient residents are in

She said members of the Oak Bay Recreation Action Group are canvassing residents who signed their petition of February, 1953, in favor of a curling, hockey and swimming pool complex.

Mrs. Elford says that RAG canvassers could find 50 per cent support for the Farmer swap in the Victoria Riding Academy area she would reintroduce the matter.

The mayor said the RAG petition received 63 per cent support from residents living in the area on the north side Uplands golf course.

She would take action, she said, if this area proved to be 50 per cent in favor of Farm-er's proposal.

Machismo'-Latin Woman's Deadweight

BUENOS AIRES — Latin America is bubbling with new political and social ideas and the old conservative order, for all its remarkable resilience, is crumbling. One aspect of this is a revolt of women.

this is a revolt of women.

In much of rural Latin America a woman is still condemned to be a child-bearing drudge with little prospect of escape — unless she is extraordinarily attractive. It is one aspect of general backwardness, in the more progressive countries women are how demanding equality with men, but fighting against an archaic conception of their role rather than against legal disability.

In Argentina, for example, lightened country with a humane approach to social problems, women in theory already enjoy complete equality with men. A minor adjustment in 1968 removed the last vestiges of old laws making them second-class citizens. But whatever the law may say, most Argentines are as convinced as any of their fellow Latin Americans that a woman's place is in the kitchen, the church, the nursery or the bed.

Despite the considerable chievements of many Argen-ine women, some of whom, uch as Victoria Ocampo or Marta Argerich, have won in-ternational renown, they have still to make modest political

The Roman Catholic Church is a powerful component of the nation's establishment, so there are no provisions for divorce, and many women separated from their hus-bands are inhibited from striking out on their own. The Church also stands in the way Church also stands in the way of birth control. Many women in the poorer provinces spend their lives bearing children they are unable to provide

Women in Argentina won the right to vote after the Second World War. It was awarded them by Juan Peron, whose wife Evita did much to persuade him that in Argentina, at least, they would not automatically vote for more conservative politicians. The charismatic Evita improved the lot of Argentine women, the lot of Argentine women to her own undoubted talents than to her position as the president's wife. An attempt by Peron to have her run as his vice-president was firmly quashed by the army chiefs of the day. They felt that having a woman outrank them would have been an affont to their have been an affront to their dignity.

Party Split

Even today the Peronist party is split into a women's party and a men's party, although in the sporadic Angentine elections the votes are counted together. In socialist Chile they are still counted separately and there the women vote much more conservatively than do the men.

The Peronist system is a realistic way of letting women play a major role in the movement, rather than a their place. The Peronist wo-men's leaders are far more influential figures than any women members of the other

They have also proved as violent as the men, and are equally prone to use bullets to settle their quarrels.

Women are to be found among the leaders of the numerous Argentine guerrilla movements. Many of them are drawn from the ranks of the huge army of women teachers. Primary and secondary education is dominated by women, and provides practically the only opening for moderately-talented girls. It is thanks to the heroism of many young women, frequentmany young women, frequently in their late teens or early 20s, that children in remote areas receive any education at all. Young girls from Buenos Aires or other pros-perous cities, who have hand about the appalling poverty that is general in the backlands by teaching there, make willing recruits for terrorist cells determined to bring about a "revolution" at any price. Education depends so heavily on women because the wages are so wretched that few men are tempted to try and subsist on them.

Nutritionist Carol Ireton thinks the best way to get children to eat vegetables is for parents to use a reward and punishment system.

Vegetables To Tempt Children

Michelle Koski turns up nose at vegetable dish.

But she starts to eat because she wants dessert.

By ANN DUNSMUIR Times Staff

A famous New Yorker cartoon shows a small girl glaring at a dinner plate. Her anxious mother says: "It's broccoli dear." And the little girl answers: "I say it's spinach, and I say the hell with it."

Unfortunately most pre-school children share this little girl's opinion of vegetables. In most homes, this nourishing part of a meal ends up in the garbage instead of the child.

In the past, nutritionists have given good advice on the kinds of vegetables needed but failed to suggest how a mother can get these requirements off the plate and into the etables in contrasting colors and serve them attractively arranged on the plate."

But no vegetable hater worth his salt is going to fall for Now, at least one nutritionist has done some practical search on the problem of getting the child to eat vegeta-

Carol Preton, an instructor in the department of home economics at the University of British Columbia, conducted a study on the modification of vegetable eating behavior in preschool children while studying for her, Ms. in nutrition at Pennsylvania State University this year.

Miss Ireton presented a paper on her research at the Diatetic Association's annual convention held recently at the Empress Hotel.

For her study, Miss Ireton chose 19 children attending the or her study. Miss freton chose is children attending the university's nursery school. She chose children from low income families because a U.S. national survey had found such children deficient in Vitamins A and C. She chose vegetables rich in these vitamins for the study. Vegetables selected were asparagus, broccoli, cauliflower, spinach and squash. Miss Ireton prepared five luncheon menus which remained constant throughout the study. Only the day on which the test vegetable was served varied. During the first phase, the method of vegetable preparation was also varied.

Each meal included a protein dish, a test vegetable, a raw vegetable, bread and butter sandwiches, milk and des-

Miss Ireton said that children would cat any vegetable raw but refused to taste most cooked vegetables.

The study was divided into two three-week periods. During the first period, test vegetables were served three different ways.

For example, squash was served buttered, baked with honey or baked with applesauce. Spinach was served but-tered, with sweet and sour sauce and lemon juice and hard-cooked eggs.

Teachers who ate with the children were instructed not to comment on the test vegetable which was never described by

I didn't want children refusing a dish because they had heard someone say they 'hated' that particular vegetable,' Miss Ireton said.

Varying the method of preparation didn't help much el-ther. Named or anonymous, buttered or creamed, most children wouldn't even taste the vegetable.— Miss Treton concluded that time spent preparing sauces and seasonings was wasted. No matter what she did to a vegetable, children wouldn't eat it.

Children who ate a few vegetables preferred them plain and buttered. The most popular variation turned out to be squash baked with applesauce. Throughout the study, frozen vegetables were used so that quality would not vary nor af-

During the second three-week period, Miss Ireton used the technique of behavior modification. This involves rewarding desirable behavior and ignoring or punishing undesirable ing desirable behavior and ignoring or punishing undesirable behavior.

All vegetables were served buttered and teachers were asked to praise and encourage children who ate vegetables.

Children who ate their test portion were rewarded with a gummed animal sticker.

Fruit was served to all children for dessert but those with a sticker could exchange it for a more popular dessert, such as ice cream or chocolate pudding.

Vegetable consumption increased remarkably.

One little girl ate 10 portions of cauliflower (200 grams) at one meal. The percentage of vegetables eaten rose from 32 per cent in the first phase to 74 per cent in the second.

Miss Ireton said that in phase two all children at least tasted their vegetables and in many cases ate one or more servings.

She concludes that "behavior modification is an effective method of stimulating vegetable eating behavior in young children in an institutional setting."

"Whether this method would work in a home setting remains to be determined." Miss Ireton said.

It would. Mothers have been using this method for generations — only they call it bribery.

Houlihan and Dufferin's engineer, Cpl. Neville Moss, have more than the average man's interest in Canada Safe Boating Week, which begins Saturday.

Both have seen first-hand the tragedy that's behind every statistic the RCC lists. They'd like to see those statistics shrink. During our trip they talked about how this could be done.

Both agreed the main reason British Columbia faces a marine search and rescue problem greater than most areas is because there are "more boats and less experience" now that pleasure boating is within the reach of thousands.

Aboard Dufferin, the two officers carry a supply of the booklet, Safety Afloat, which they hand out to every boat they check.

It's a simply written book, available free You don't have to be a seasoned seaman appreciate its message.

YOUR HEALTH: Dr. Walter Alvarez

Helping Children With Leukemia

The Albany Medical Centre in Albany, New York, reports that they recently were able, with the help of a bone marrow transplant, to produce a remission of advanced leukemia. Leukemia is a cancer of the blood-making organs, one of which is bone marrow. The patient was a six-year-old boy.

This rare technique, performed in only a few medical centres in the United States, can in some cases "significantly extend the lives of childhood leukemia victims."

The bone marrow that the child received was taken from his 7-year-old sister. There is "strong evidence" that the transplant is now working well.

Physicians attending the boy are hopeful that other leukemia victims can be helped with this procedure. This is hopeful news.

A RECORD OF ASSASSINATIONS

In the U.S. News and World Report (May 29, 1972), I read a record of the number of assassinations of prominent U.S. officials. According to the article, the shooting of Governor Wallace was the tenth attack on a president, a president-elect, or presidential candidate, in America.

Besides John F. Kennedy, three presidents were slain while in office: Abraham Lincoln, James Garfield and William McKinley. There were unsuccessful attempts made on the lives of President Andrew Jackson, President Theodore Roosevelt, President-elect Franklin D. Roosevelt, and President Harry Truman.

As we all know to our sorrow, Robert Kennedy was campaigning for the presidential nomination when he was shot. Senator Huey Long of Louisians was shot to death in 1935, and Hubert Humphrey was shot at, but not hit, when he was mayor of Minneapolis in 1947.

A NEW GROUP OF POWERFUL DRUGS

During the last year, I have been reading a number of articles on a remarkable group of 14 chemicals (called fatty acids) known as the prostaglandins. These chemicals are found in tiny amounts in several parts of the human body. They have already been used on thousands of women in several foreign countries to induce labor, either for an abortion or to cause a child to be born "at term."

I understand that these powerful new drugs are not yet available in our pharmacies in the United States. They are still being purified and studied. I mention them here only so that when they appear on the market, people will have some idea of what they are and what they can do.

Dear Readers, In these days of trying to limit a wardrobe for travelling, and at the same time get the most mileage from your clothes, I can't rave too much about the vir-

Jumpers can be the main-stay of any wardrobe. They can double as a sleeveless dress, which is important if you live in a climate that is variable. They can be changed instantly by the addition of many types of shirts, blouses and sweaters. jumper is definitely more slenderizing for the "not so thins," because your eye is focused on the entire length of the garment without a break or color change at the waistline. Pictured are three of the many styles that can be found in every pattern book. The ones pictured are Wear them belted or unbelted, short or long, but wear them and enjoy them!

Dear Readers,
Summer isn't even here, and I'm getting letters from you about the disasters of working with cotton knits. I have warned you-several times about pre-shrinking cotton knits, but I guess I must do so once more. Cotton knits shrink an incredible amount. It's better to be safe than sorry. Always consider this factor when, Dirchasing the fabric, Add about one fourth of a yard extra, possibly fabric. Add about one fourth of a yard extra, possibly more if you are making a cotton knit suit.

A helpful hint for pre-shrinking is to machine baste or hand baste the selvage edges together before washing. The piece of fabric will retain its shape, and you'll save time in trying to keep the selvages nice and even after washing and drying. Wet the fabric in the same temperature of water you will use later. Also put through the dryer in the same manner.

A few extra minutes of your time to prevent disaster will make the cotton knits you make yourself far superior to the ones you buy, which invariably shrink out of shapeafter a few washings.

after a few washings.

Harvesting Tips For Lavender

This column about cutting lavender for drying is two weeks ahead of the gardener's need, in the hope that you will

Each year we are likely to forget this pleasant task until suddenly there is lavender in full bloom and past its prime

The type of lavender used for the fragrance of its flower buds is Lavandula vera, originally named L' officinalis by the old herbalists.

Whether this is the "true" French or "true" English lavender is immaterial, for both countries grow quantities for commercial distillation of the oils. * * *

Here, it is the lavender with flower stems 10 or 12 inches long with the flower buds elustered on the top couple of inches which is the one to cut for drying. Other colors and dwarf varieties have less perfume.

The highest oil content (therefore the strongest scent) is said to be in the unopened buds just before flowering time. Therefore it is recommended to cut the stems the day you findthe bottom flower open. The spike opens from the bottom

You may find it hard to believe that some folks do not realize it is the unopened flower buds which are dried for potential or sachets or whatever you wish. They have said to me "Flowers? I didn't know lavender had any flowers."

* * * When you have the satisfaction of growing your own (and you can, even in a balcony tub), you will soon enjoy the development of the flower stems and their little grey-sheathed buds. Leave a few until they open fully, to study the exquisite perfection of the blooms.

Note also the same square stems you find in related plants, the mints, salvias, thymes and nepetas — all Labiates of the Ming Family. The oil content of herbs we gather for flavor or fragrance is at its peak around noon on a sunny dry day, after the plants have been thoroughly warmed and dried by the sun, and all parts are active in growth.

Cut the stems; tie in small bundles for hanging to dry, or spread thinly on newspaper or trays in an airy sunless room.

Lavender may take a week to dry thoroughly. When you can strip the buds easily from the stem in one motion of the fingers along the stem, it is dry enough for shedding.

You may need to wear rubber gloves for shedding; the oil irritates sensitive skins. Store in dry, sealed jars to use later.

BOLUTION WEDNESDAY

The Bridge Expert

By FRED KARPIN

A reader of this column recently wrote to me inquiring what the "smother play" was. Here it is in today's deal.

Before presenting it, I would like to state that during my 40 years of bridge playing and writing, I have never encountered this play in actual competition. Neither have any of my friends. Here it is, as it appears in bridge literature.

Neither side vulnerable.

NORTH ♦ A 9 7 ♥ Q 10 5 ♦ 8 7 4

SOUTH 4 G J 10 8 5 V A K J V A K 7

The bidding:
South West North East
2 Pass 3 Pass
6 Pass Pass Pass

Opening leads Nine of V.

23 Stay with bust tyre — it belongs to you (8) West opens the nine of hearts, which South captures with his king. The queen of spades is then led and the finesse is taken successfully against West's king. The jack of spades is led next, and another them. other finesse is taken, East discarding a heart. At this point West has the K-6 of trumps remaining. Dummy has the singleton ace. It appears that West must take his trump king in time

Declarer next plays the ace and king of diamonds. He now leads the jack of hearts and overtakes it with the board's queen. Dummy's remaining diamond is them ruffed by South, after which the ace of hearts is eashed.

but appearances can be de-

Hearts and diamonds have now been eliminated from both the North and South clubs, the king of clubs, and a third club, which/East wins with his queen.

With two tricks remaining to be played, this is now the position, with East being on lead. South's last two eards lead. South's last two eards are the 10-8 of trumps. West has the K-6 of trumps. Dummy possesses the singleton ace of trumps and the six of clubs. East, to trick twelve, now leads a diamond (or, in theory, a heart if he had one to lead).

Whatever East leads, South ruffs with his eight of trumps. If West overruffs with the ldng, Duramy's ace overruffs West, and South's ten of trumps wins the last trick. If West underruffs South's eight-west underruits south's eight-spot by playing the six, dummy's remaining club is discarded, and the ace of trumps wins the final trick.

And so West's king of trumps is "smothered" at trick twelve, and declarer fulfills his slam contract. That's the way it happens in bridge

Barrage Continues on Takeover Bill

OTTAWA (CP) — The foreign-takeovers hill, battered by criticism since it was introduced in the Commons May 4, was hit by another full-scale broadside from opposition MPs Monday.

The bulk of the flak came from New Democrats, who denounced the legislation as a weak-kneed and foothless non-answer to one of the most critical issues facing the country.

The government gave the bill high priority when it was unveiled last month, but there were signs Monday that the Hard bargaining among the parties behind the scenes might salvage some government legislation — for example, acceptance of NDP views on labor law in return for getting other bills through.

Another measure the government wants passed is one to limit some election expenses — promised for four years:

Extended sitting hours are planned today and Thursday. MPs critical of the takeovers legislation have proposed 32 separate amendments and the House managed to wade.

Monday.

If approved unchanged, the bill would give the government power to screen foreign purchase of any Canadian company with assets of more than $250,000, or annual sales of $3 million, unless judged of significant benefit to Canadians.

sidered Monday appeared to be defeated by a voice vote but a recorded vote was de-ferred until a later date. One change, proposed by Max Saltsman (NDP-Waterloo), would broaden the scope of the screening agency to consider social and political, as well as economic implications of a takeover.

Without weighing those added factors, Mr. Saltsman said, the bill would be a farce hardly worth passing.

"We would be right back where we were before except that the government would have legislation to justify what it has always done—that its, permit unlimited foreign ownership in Canada."

Industry Minister Jean-Luc Pepin said the bill must confine itself to essentially economic itself to essentially economic itself to essentially economic itself to essentially economy." The main purpose . . is not to enhance the capacity of Canadians to direct our economy." he said.

But, by ensuring that outsiders operate in the interests of Canada, the government would nonetheless meet "this very desirable objective."

government attitude toward foreign ownership is like the Saskatchewan dog that sat on the cactus plant. It howled, but it was too lazy to get up.

He observed that there were only 11 Liberal members in the Commons when he spoke and asked where the remaining 137 Liberals were, including 13 who have said publicly the legislation is not stringent enough.

Hugh John Flemming (PC-Carleton-Charlotte) stood out as the only opposition member to support the government.

The former New Brunswick premier agreed with the general phrasing of the bill.

Shaky Truce Begins

BELFAST (UPI) — A ceasefire called by the provisional wing of the Irish Republican Army brought a shaky peace to Northern Ireland today, but it was punctuated by at least one death. British Army officers said they would wait and see whether the truce lasts.

Midnight in Londonderry a single shot rang out across the city as the 12 strokes toiled from the clock tower. In the Bally-murphy district of Belfast IRA gunmen marked midnight with a volley of shots— into the air, not at British soldiers nor Prot-estant listermer. estant Ulstermen.

Then silence as the people of Northern Ireland waited quietly to see if it were true: a ceasefire that might be the first step toward finding peace and ending three bloody years of fighting actually was working.

started. Huge bonfires started in Bally-murphy and Andersonstown, two Roman Catholic areas in Belfast.

More than 700 cases of beer hijacked from a brewer's truck Monday were broken out and the singing and shouting started.

And in the Catholic enclave at Falls Road, residents stopped British soldiers to share a drink and a moment of celebration. The area has seen some of the fiercest fighting to the three-year campaign.

"Fantastic," was all the British Army spokesman had to say about it.

There was, however, some sniping at British army posts an hour after the truce went into effect, presumably by die-hard militant members of the IRA who found it hard to accept a truce. Whether today's assailants were also die-hard guerrillas was not known.

Police said 18-year-old William Galloway Police said 18-year-old william Galloway died in a hospital today of gunshot wounds suffered in a clash between Protestants and Roman Catholics just before the cease-fire went into effect at midnight.

Detectives were also investigating the death of 38-year-old Bernard Norey to determine whether it was a part of the sectarian violence. Two unidentified men halled a bakery worker doing his rounds this morning and ordered him to drive a car containing Norey's body to a hospital. Norey was dead

Unions Form Front

The six unions which have not settled with the B.C. construction industry have formed a common front.

The six will not agree to settlement unless each of them is satisfied with the industry's offer and each will not bargain separately with Construction Labor Relations

The unions are the carpenters, electricians, plumbers, heat and frost insulators, boilermakers and cement

The 12 other unions in the B.C. and Yukon Building Trades Council have reached either final or tentative agreement with CLRA and have some of their members back on the 100.

Building trades council sec-retary Ed Fay said the coun-cil has called a meeting Wednesday for the members of the six unions.

Fay said the meeting will be "informational," to bring union members up to date on recent RCMP raids on union offices and to discuss what he called B.C.'s "anti-labor legis-lation".

The unions are boycotting the arbitration hearings, which are scheduled to continue Wednesday.

CLRA president Chuck Con-naghan said today he feels the average construction workers in the province are not being given an accurate picture of the CLRA position.

He said they don't realize that the pattern of settlements has been such that the average worker will be making $174 more per month by Outcher 1973

New Try For Swap -Elford

A new bid is being made to take advantage of a land swap which would provide Oak Bay with a winter sports complex.

Oak Bay Mayor Frances Elford said today she will try to get council to reverse its decision on Monday, not to go ahead with the swap proposed by Farmer Construction, if sufficient residents are in

She said members of the Oak Bay Recreation Action Group are canvassing residents who signed their petition of February, 1971, in favor of a curling, hockey and swimming pool complex. swimming pool complex.

Mrs. Elford says that if RAG canwassers could find 50 per cent support for the Farmer swap in the Victoria Riding Academy area she would reintroduce the matter.

The mayor said the RAG petition received 63 per cent support from residents living in the area on the north side of Lansdowne up to Cedar Hill Cross Road and from the Saanieh boundary Uplands golf course.

She would take action, she said, if this area proved to be 50 per cent in favor of Farmer's proposal.

TO SHOW MODEL

She added that RAG members would be showing residents the model of Farmer's proposed recreation com-plex, revealed to the public for the first time at Monday's meeting.

At the meeting, Terry Farmer confirmed that his company was not interested in buying the valuable 9.3-acre academy site. The swap was dependent on the complex, he said.

His company proposed to build three 12-storey towers and 50 townhouses on the site.

The centre he proposes to build on municipal-owned build on municipal-owned land near the Oak Bay junior and senior high schools would not include a swimming pool

This would have to be built later at taxpayers' expense.

Residents were told at Monday's meeting, that council had already commissioned John Di-Castri to design a total complex and were shown the Di Castri model, complete with swimming pool.

Aid, Shirley Dowell said brochures were being pre-pared and a referendum on the sports complex had been planned for early fall.

Alds. Brian Smith, John Goult and Douglas McLelland were in agreement that the swap proposal had many ramifications, several as yet un-spelled, and that the people near the riding academy should be considered, as well

Patience Paid With New Life

By DONNA CLEMENTS Times Staff

COWICHAN STATION - Michael Hawkes, 47, of Cowichan Station, was given a new lease on life just over a week ago when rushed to Vancouver Gen-eral Hospital to receive a pair of matched kidneys.

He had them removed last February.

While waiting for the transplant he made two trips a week to a Victoria hospital where for 12 hours his blood was cleaned through a kidney machine.

Hawkes was eager to have the operation because he felt it would give him and his family a chance to again live a full and active life.

Hawkes, former foreman of a Duncan feed mill, his wife Lois, and two teen-age children, were unable to go on holidays. As well as the weekly trips to Victoria, he had to stay near his telephone in

More than 700 cases of beer hijacked from a brewer's truck Monday were broken out and the singing and shouting started.

And in the Catholic enclave at Falls Road, residents stopped British soldiers to share a drink and a moment of celebration. The area has seen some of the fiercest fighting in the three-year campaign.

"Fantastic," was all the British Army spokesman had to say about it.

There was however, some sniping at British army posts an hour after the truce went into effect, presumably by die-hard militant members of the IRA who found it hard to accept a truce. Whether today's assailants were also die-hard guerrillas was not known.

Police said 18-year-old William Galloway died in a hospital today of gunshot wounds suffered in a clash between Protestants and Roman Catholics just before the cease fire
